Smiling Albino (SA) unveils a suite of world-class motorcycle adventures

Turning a personal hobby into a unique travel product, Bangkok-based Smiling Albino announces the launch of three custom motorcycle trips in Thailand and one in Nepal. Designed for intermediate to experienced riders, itineraries focus on emerging destinations and feature vintage chopper journeys as well as on/off-road rides.

“After covering thousands of miles of road and trails in Thailand, I believe that our two Northern Thailand trips, Good Dirty Fun and Good Clean Fun, are simply the best overall experience in the far north. For people that want to ride off the beaten-path and gain a cultural experience at the same time, these trips are exceptional,” adds co-founder Scott Coates.

In Thailand’s Northeastern Isaan, region, SA has launched Isaan Steel Horses, a multi-day chopper-style trip through a region largely ignored by tour operators and tourism ministries. “I feel we have carved out a new map of the real Thailand”, says Fraser. “Isaan is the least explored area in Thailand and features a unique culinary and musical scene which is a focal point of the trip. Mountains, rivers and few western faces make it a real explorer’s paradise.”

Enfield Enigma sends riders upon the mountains of Nepal atop vintage Royal Enfield motorcycles. “These bikes are a fun, nostalgic ride on their own, but adding the Himalayas as your backdrop makes this an unbeatable adventure and cultural experience rolled into one,” says Coates. “We provide a way to ride the rooftop of the world in style”, he added.

All of SA’s motorcycle journeys feature expert leaders, support crew, gourmet picnics and full room and board hostmanship.

Smiling Albino co-founder Daniel Fraser will be in North America and available for interviews from Aug 17– Sept 20, 2010, and in London, UK from September 22-25, 2010.
