Road to Angkor athletic adventure takes travellers to Angkor Wat Half Marathon

Smiling Albino (SA) raises the travel bar with a one-time only active adventure, Road to Angkor, aimed at active travellers.

From Nov 29 - Dec 6, 2010, a maximum of 10 guests will paddle, run, cycle and hike their way through Thailand's Golden Triangle and to Cambodia to take part in the 'Angkor Wat Half Marathon and Bike Race' (<http://www.angkormarathon.org/en/>). Each day features active adventure in unique locales topped-off with participation in two international events set within the Angkor temple complex.

"We took part in the Angkor Wat Half Marathon in 2009 and immediately wished we'd brought guests with us," explains SA co-founder, Scott Coates. "This is an exciting way to experience the magic of the temples of Angkor by participating in a 30km or 100km bike race and 10km or 21km run. This is the perfect opportunity to bring our favourite activities together in an action-packed adventure in some of the world's most beautiful areas."
